Title: Efficacy Of Glass Ionomer Cement, Tetric N Flow And Biodentine As Intra Orifice Barriers With And Without Laser Activation- An Invitro Study.

Presented at: 36th IACDE National Conference & 21st IACDE National PG Convention,
Kaher's V K Institute of Dental Sciences, Belagavi, Karnataka.

Abstract

Aim: Evaluate the sealing ability and pushout bond strength of Glass Ionomer Cement (GIC), Tetric -N-Flow and Biodentine as intra-orifice barrier with and without laser-activation.

Materials and methods: Institutional ethical clearance was obtained for this study. Human extracted single rooted 120 mandibular premolars were decoronated to standardize 13mm root length and instrumented with rotary ProTaper universal system till F4 and alternatively irrigated with 3 ml of 3% sodium hypochlorite and normal saline followed by obturation using gutta-percha and AH-plus sealer. About 3.5 mm of gutta-percha was removed from the orifice and samples were randomly divided into three groups(n=40 each) with intra-orifice barrier materials. Group1:GIC; group2:Tetric-N-Flow and group3:Biodentine. Each group is further subdivided into two subgroups A and B(n= 20 each) with and without laser.

Half of above prepared samples (n=60) were evaluated for coronal microleakage, by dye penetration method using stereomicroscope and in another half samples (n=60) push-out bond strength was evaluated using 3mm horizontal sections prepared from coronal-root and loaded under universal testing machine. Data was statistically analyzed by One way-ANOVA and post hoc comparison tests.

Al-Badar Educational & Charitable Trusts

AL-BADAR RURAL DENTAL COLLEGE & HOSPITAL, KALABURAGI

Affiliated to Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences Bangalore &
Recognized by Dental Council of India (New Delhi)

Results: Laser activation in each group showed greater pushout bond strength. Biodentine with laser (group 3A) was better compared to all groups for both pushout bond strength and microleakage ($p \leq 0.05$).

Conclusion: Biodentine with laser activation increased pushout bond strength and decreased microleakage among all groups.

Clinical significance: Biodentine with laser activation before placement of coronal plug increases quality of bond strength and reduces microleakage; thus increases the success rate of root canal treatment.

Keywords: Biodentine, Tetric-N-Flow, Intra-orifice barrier, Pushout bond strength, Microleakage
